PREFATORY NOTE.

'The student of modern history especially needs a knowledge of Geography, because first and last his inquiries will lead him to every quarter of the globe.'—Arnold.

TEACHERS and STUDENTS alike, have long felt the want of a connected Series of Maps, prepared expressly to illustrate the leading events of History, adapted for Schools, and published at a price so moderate as to be brought within the reach of all learners. The object of this Atlas is to supply the deficiency. It is uniform in size and price with the Author's smaller Atlases of Physical and General Geography; and from the scrupulous care bestowed on its production, the Publishers trust that it will be received with the same high favour which has been universally accorded to them.

Without the aid of Maps, History can neither be thoroughly taught nor perfectly understood; hence one reason why, notwithstanding the variety and excellence of text-books for Schools, and the many attractions of History to the young, the subject is still so little appreciated in this country. To read of historical events without ascertaining their localities on the Map, is a waste of time; the little information thus acquired being soon lost, because it is not, by the aid of the eye, impressed on the memory. The modern Maps found in ordinary School Atlases are useless for purposes of Historical Study, as they neither contain the requisite names, nor show the divisions and boundaries of countries during the period under consideration.

In order to derive full benefit from this Atlas, the pupil should be required, in course of reading, at once to look out on the Map of the period under review, the name of every place as it occurs; to observe its relation to other places, and the political divisions of the country at the time referred to. The Index, which is very copious, and the arrangement of the Maps, as far as possible, in chronological order, will be found to afford every facility for this pursuit.

While the Atlas is specially designed to illustrate British History, and so contains all the names which occur in the best school text-books on that subject, it also serves for a course of Modern European History, in sufficient detail for all ordinary puposes.

During the lengthened and laborious researches involved in the construction of this Atlas, the Author has been indebted for much valuable aid to friends well known for their acquirements, and their experience in communicating historical knowledge. To all of them he now begs to offer his grateful thanks, especially to Mr JAMES H. DEE, of St Mary's Schools, Elland, for his disinterested and unwearied kindness in revising the proof-sheets, and for many able suggestions for their improvement.

Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension on the transformation efficiency of Agrobacterium strains. The number of transformed cells was determined by the number of colonies obtained on the selective medium. The results are the mean of three independent experiments. Error bars represent the standard deviation.
